I think of Craftsy as one of the factors that has changed the face of sewing. I bought my first Craftsy class during the first RTW Fast in 2012, and I was hooked. Soon after I finished a basic skirt class, I bought Susan Khalje's Online Couture Dress Class, and learned the real way to make a dress. That class forever changed my sewing.

I'm back today with more of what I've been making recently (and more work bathroom selfies than should be in one post). Speaking of work I'm off from tomorrow through January 1, which is TWELVE days (woot!) and I'm really hoping to get a few things done in the sewing room. December has sucked (see below) and I'm so ready for the New Year. In the meantime, let's get back to the sewing stuff.

She didn't age well. The adjustment cogs became stiff. I think they were quite tight to start with. The covering got a bit patchy and loose in places. it wasn't particularly padded, was difficult to pin to and the hem gauge accessory at the bottom just broke off one day.

The machine seems to have been packaged especially for Lidl - the manual is labelled with a Lidl logo. It has a 3 year warranty (just keep your receipt), so the fact that it has been 'branded' by Lidl and has been sold by them before made me feel more secure about this warranty, rather than them having bought a job lot of overlockers they are selling off.
